Poznań Celebrated 32nd St Martin's Day With a Parade, Music and a City Full of Goodwill

Up to 60,000 people joined Poznań's 32nd St Martin's Day celebrations on 11th November, enjoying the parade, rogale, concerts and community activities.

Poznań has once again become the capital of goodness. Looking back on yesterday's 32nd St Martin's Day celebrations.

Joyful, safe, friendly and delicious: that's how everyone celebrated in Poznań on 11th November. The beauty of Poznań traditions, the joy of a shared heritage and the pride in values that the city shares with the whole country and the world were all showcased during the 32nd St Martin's Day celebrations. Nearly 500 people took part in the parade, which was the main event of the day.

Luckily, everyone could also enjoy the pleasant weather. Although cold, this year it did not rain, allowing visitors to take part in all the planned activities. Visitors were able to relish the delicious rogale świętomarcińskie, listen to concerts featuring a varied line-up of artists, including the evening's headline act Nosowska, and watch the colourful parade.

Throughout the day, from the opening of the gates to the Imieninowe Miasteczko (Name Day Village) until the festivities came to an end, Święty Marcin Street welcomed between 50,000 and 60,000 guests. The main parade itself attracted an estimated 10,000 spectators on site. The celebrations took place in a safe, comfortable and accessible atmosphere, sending plenty of goodwill from Poznań out into the world.

Anna Hryniewiecka, Director of CK ZAMEK, said:

“We are truly proud that it was here at the ZAMEK Cultural Centre in Poznań, over 30 years ago, that this unique local tradition of celebrating St Martin’s Street Name Day was born, a tradition that has become a cherished part of Poznań’s heritage and a phenomenon that sets us apart from other cities. We feel that, together with the people of Poznań, we create this festival, and that is precisely where its greatest value lies.”

A new route for Poznań’s much-loved parade

The highlight of this year’s celebrations was the traditional parade, which followed a new route through the Name Day Village. Proceedings began when an actor portraying St Martin received the keys to the city from the Mayor of Poznań, officially setting the festivities in motion.

Nearly 500 participants, many of whom had spent months preparing their costumes and floats, took part in the procession. Among the familiar sights was the iconic Bamberka, alongside numerous references to the city's history and identity. Rogale świętomarcińskie, the traditional music of Wielkopolska and figures from Poznań's past all featured. The parade also paid tribute to the workers of the Cegielski factory and recalled the visit of Ignacy Jan Paderewski, represented on a balcony.

There were contemporary themes, too. Environmental references included a Warta River filled with fish, while a humorous installation featuring the words “inhale” and “exhale” encouraged everyone to take a moment to appreciate the good atmosphere. Sports groups joined the procession, accompanied by live music from marching bands and orchestras. The whole parade moved to a lively rhythm, greeted by enthusiastic applause from the crowds lining the route.

The procession ended on a musical note with a performance by Chór Pogłosy. The choir presented a specially composed piece by Sambor Dudziński, featuring lyrics created during literary workshops for young people.

The new route provided more space for both participants and spectators, making the procession safer and more comfortable to enjoy. There were also additional ways to follow the event. The parade was broadcast on a large screen beside the main stage and inside the Great Hall at CK ZAMEK, with an online transmission allowing people further afield to watch. It was another way for Poznań to share the celebrations and its message of goodwill with audiences around the world.

The Name Day Village brought Święty Marcin to life

The celebrations extended well beyond the parade, with activities taking place throughout the day in the Name Day Village and inside CK ZAMEK.

St. Martin's Day: When Poznań came together to celebrate the Day of Giving

St. Martins Day: Poznań comes Together to Celebrate the day of Giving

As an American living in Poznań, experiencing St. Martin's Day was a special opportunity to better understand the traditions and history of the city I now call home. Seeing the streets filled with colorful costumes, music and generations of people coming together to celebrate something so deeply rooted in their community was truly memorable. What stood out to me most was the pride people take in preserving these traditions and sharing them with others. Living abroad has given me a greater appreciation for the history and culture that make each place unique, and moments like this remind me how fortunate I am to experience Poland beyond the perspective of a visitor. It's one thing to learn about a city's traditions, but something entirely different to witness them firsthand and feel welcomed into the celebration.

Through this photo story, I wanted to highlight some of the individuals who brought the celebration to life, capturing the faces, expressions and moments that made St. Martin's Day so memorable.

Fifty-two couples have been recognised for reaching at least 50 years of marriage at a special ceremony held at Poznań City Hall, where Mayor Jacek Jaśkowiak presented the medals awarded for Long-Term Marital Life.

The celebration brought the couples and their guests together in the City Hall's White Hall, with the occasion marked by a short piano concert, Mendelssohn's Wedding March and a traditional celebratory toast.

Each couple received a medal, a congratulatory letter and flowers in recognition of their decades together.

Mayor congratulates couples on keeping their promises

Addressing the guests, Mayor Jacek Jaśkowiak spoke about the significance of reaching such a milestone and the example these couples set for younger generations.

"It is a beautiful moment when young people go to the Registry Office to make certain promises to one another. However, what impresses me most are those who have managed to keep those promises for 50 years or longer. Without doubt, you can be a role model not only for your closest family members, but also for your neighbours and friends."

Christmas preparations are spreading across Poznań, with the city's traditional markets and neighbourhood squares hosting a programme of festive gatherings, craft workshops and seasonal entertainment in the weeks ahead.

With community events for older residents and Christmas fairs in Łazarz, Jeżyce and Wilda, this year's programme brings some of the city's smaller, familiar locations into the festive calendar.

At Targowisko Świt, Poznańskie Rynki i Place, the new municipal unit responsible for managing the city's markets, has joined forces with the Centrum Inicjatyw Senioralnych to organise a series of neighbourhood meetings for older residents.

The gatherings will offer an opportunity to meet neighbours, enjoy a conversation and take part in seasonal creative activities, including making Christmas decorations and festive arrangements. Coffee, tea and sweet refreshments will also be provided.

The first workshop takes place on 27th November, when participants will have the opportunity to make their own reusable shopping bag. Advance registration is required by telephone on 61 888 46 49.

Poznań's iconic Arena: The story behind the landmark and plans to bring it back to life

The history of one of Poznań's most iconic buldings and latest updates about the renovation plans.

For generations of Poznanians, Arena has been a familiar part of the city's landscape. Its distinctive domed roof, rising above the greenery of Park Kasprowicza, has made it one of Poznań's most recognisable buildings.

Opened in 1974, the Arena was conceived as a modern, multi-purpose venue at a time when large indoor event spaces were becoming an important feature of Poland's cities. Its unusual architecture drew inspiration from Italy, while its subsequent history became closely connected with the cultural and sporting life of Poznań.

Now, after years of uncertainty and a closure caused by the deteriorating condition of the building, the city is preparing a new renovation project. The ambition is to bring the Arena back into use while retaining the distinctive exterior that has made it such a recognisable feature of the city.

The first COOL Mum Walk Club meeting took place in Poznań, bringing together just five mothers. There was no big organisation, no complicated strategy and no ambitious expansion plan. Maintaining the appearance of living in accordance with social norms in the idyllic community of a 19th-century village makes them both miserable. Yerma's burning desire for motherhood kindles her hope for a better tomorrow. She believes her yet unborn child to be destined to melt the ice in Juan's heart and harden their marriage in fire anew.
